Passed on Third Reading at Common Council Meeting.

THE MAYOR'S SIGNATURE NOW

That Is All That Is Necessay to Make It Operative-Amounts of the Options on the Property That Will Be Required.

It remains only for the ordinance submitting to the vote of the people the question of appropriating $150,000 for the erection of a viaduct on West Lackawanna avenue to receive the signature of Mayor Connell to become law and as he has signified his intention of appropriation of the contraction of approving it, it can virtually be considered operative.

Only one vote was recorded against it Only one vote was recorded against it on final passage in common council last night. Mr. Loftus of the Third ward had conscientious scruples against increasing the city's debt and voted accordingly. Some little uncesiness was created among the West Side board of trade boomers, who filled the space in the rear of the chamber, when Captain Moir picked out what he thought might be a fatal flaw in the when Captain Molr picked out what he thought might be a fatal flaw in the wording of the ordinance. It was that the question of bonding the city shall be submitted to a vote of the people at the next general election.

last night introduced and succeeded in having passed a resolution appropriating $3,500 to meet the expense of the sewer repairs in front of the Wyoming house and of repairing the Olyphant road near Capouse where the rains have made it well nigh impassable. Common council's idea that before electing delegates or otherwise approv-ing of the Reading convention called to revise the laws governing cities of the third class, that the opinion of all the third class cities of the state should be sought as to the necessity of such a convention, was heartly approved of by the select branch and the matter was referred to the judiciary committee for investigation. The ordinance repealing the Providence and Abington turnpike compact was called up for final passage but at the suggestion of Mr. Chitten-den it was referred to the special committee which now has that matter in

The recent request of five Massachu-setts cotton mills for information con-The recent request of five Massachusetts cotton mills for information concerning this city's manufacturing advantages wil be considered by the manufacturers' committee of the board of trade tomorrow night at 7.30 o'clock.

It will be remembered that an official of one of the concerns wrote in the interest of all five and that the mills had been ordered by the state to remove their plants from a certain river which it is proposed to use in increasing the water supply of the city of Boston. This letter was addressed to Secretary Atherion, of the board of trade, whose reply contained a quantity of information bearing upon Scranton's many advantages and its cheap culm fuel. Since then he has received from the writer of the first letter another communication stating that he would visit Scranton as soon as could be completed the clerical work in relation to the damages to be asked by his company from the state. At tomorrow night's meeting the committee, it is expected, will anticipate the visit of the Massaschusetts mill man by negotiating for sites and preparing in other ways to offer inducements at the proper time. The prospect of locating here simultaneously five cotton mills is the first opportunity of the kind and shows the great attention bestowed by manufacturers on Scranton and at the same time indicates the truth of the assertion that this city is destined on its merits to really rival the much-advertised Niagara power.

FOR THE SECOND TIME.

Miss Mainwaring Will Be the Bride of Frederick J. Lowrie.

Married, divorced and re-married, is the record of the past twenty-one months with Frederick J. Lowrie, aged months with Frederick J. Lowrie, aged 24, and Jessie Mainwaring, aged 19, both of Carbondale. They were united in wedlock yesterday by Alderman Fred Fuller. This was their second pilgrimage to the shrine of hymen, the first one having been made on April 5, 1894.

Soon after the office of Clerk of the Courts John H. Thomas opened yesterday morning there appeared a young couple for a marriage license. They were the ones aforementioned. Mr. Thomas knew that the girl is not 21 years old and refused the license without the consent of a parent or guar-dian. They went away and returned in dian. They went away and returned in the afternoon with the desired consent.

The girl's mother gave permission, and when the expectant bride was being questioned in the usual form that all parties must undergo who apply for a license, she imparted the information that she had been divorced and from the man who was present with her intending to lead her again to the altar. First Marriage in April, 1894.

Reference to the court records shows that Lowrie and Miss Mainwaring came to the clerk's office on April 5, 1894, got a license, but there is nothing to show whether or not they ever got mar-ried. In the hearing at the divorce pro-ceedings later the certificate of marriage was offered in evidence and it rage was offered in evidence and it represents that they were married on April 5, 1894, the same day the license was issued, and that the ceremony was performed by Alderman E. M. Lowrie, of Carbondale, an uncle of the grom. The couple lived together until Oct. 29, the same year they were wedded, when the young wife was forced to abandon her home and go back to live with her mother. Lowrie was cruel and jealous, she alleged, when the divorce proceedings were pending.

Craelty and Non-Support. The specific allegation on which she applied for a divo;ce from him was cruelty and non-support. On April 30, 1895, Judge Archbald handed down a decree separating her from Lowrie.

They met recently and a reconciliation was effected.

The organization consists of twenty-eight and is headed by Miss Louise Moore, a young and clever prima donna, whose voice and acting were equal to the demands of such a difficult role as "Bettina." Mr. Julius Cluretti sung the tenor part of "Fredcluretti sung the tenor part of "Fred-erick" most acceptably and won fre-quent encores. Frank Nelson and Miss Essie Barton were also good in their parts. Will Daniels, the leading come-dian of the Mackay company, is ir-resistibly funny. FUNDS FOR THE FRIENDLESS.

Another day has failed to bring any addition to the fund started by The Tribune for the benefit of the Home for the Friendless. It is possible that today's returns may be more encouraging. The Home deserves from the generous people of this community much in the way of help, apart even from the new building fund. It will be some time before that structure will be in readiness. The interval needs looking after. There are immediate expenses that call for a liberal popular response. In the meantime, this is The Tribune fund to date:

Mr. O'Brien in his argument dwelt air. O'Brien in his argument dwent upon Mrs. Henne's negligence. He said it would be a harsh rule to expect her during the hot weather in a thickly settled district to close up the windows and doors as a preventive in case a child felt inclined to wander out. Judge Jessup in reply stated that it had been proved at the trial that Mrs. Henne had servant to look after the children and her sister was in the house with her, and from all the circumstances her negligence was conclusively shown.

A case that has been gravitating up and down for a long time in the local courts was next argued. It was the action of Peter Somers against John Howey. Attorney W. S. Hulsiander appeared for the appellant and Attorney J. E. Burr for the appellee. Howey had been drawing a pension from the government and he became involved and owed some money to Somers, who obtained judgment and levied upon Howey's property. The defense was set Case of Somers Against Howey Howey's property. The defense was set up that pension money purchased it and such is exempt from sheriff's seizure. The lower court held that there was no merit in that contention. The superior court will now settle the ques-

In the matter of the case of Oscar Misselwitz, of Philadelphia., an alleged lunatic, argument was made by Attorney Joseph L. Huil, for the appellants: the appellee's attorney, Mr. Terry, of Philadelphia, was not present to make an argument but he sent in his paper book. Oscar Misselwitz, the alleged lunatic, was a resident of Philadelphia for over thirty years, living with his wife until some time during the summer of 1895, when by reason of certain domestic difficulties she left home and notwithstanding repeated requests refused

On the 9th of November last the wife secured the appointment of a commis-sion to inquire into the sanity of Mis-selwitz and later she presented another petition to the common pleas court of Philadelphia reciting that on November 4 certain real estate was sold by the sheriff to satisfy a judgment against her husband, and that there was a balance in the hands of the sheriff over and above the judgment. The court appointed a receiver and from this and decree the appeal has been taken by Matthias Seddinger and C. Wesley Ruffell, who are the attorneys in fact for Misselwitz

Appeal of John S. Hoffar. The next argument was on the appeal of John S. Hoffar, an execution creditor from the definitive decree of the court of common pleas of Wyoming county. 1894, Pearson was engaged in lumbering an peeling bark in Forkston town-ship, Wyoming county, and he had contracts with Edward and Alvin Milheim. Pearson had contracts with other employes, but about February 1, 1894, judgments were obtained against him and his personal property was sold out, bringing $1,606.05. Prior to sale claims for wages were presented to the sheriff and payment of the same demanded from the proceeds of the sale on the ground that wages were preferred claims under the provisions of the several acts of assembly. The proceeds of the sale were referred to an auditor who rejected the claims, because they were presented by men who did not come in under the statute as laborers. The question now raised is whether a contractor who does not work binealf but employs others can need to be a superior of the sale of the work himself but employs others, can present his claim under the act preferring wage claims Judge Rice handed down an order appointing Monday, Feb. 17, as the date
